The Issue

The role of the risk manager within organisations is becoming increasingly complex. Tighter legislations and a growing demand for companies to demonstrate a detailed understanding of their risk profile and appropriate action plans has put enormous pressure on organisations and their risk managers. Risk Managers often need to be an instant expert in a multitude of disciplines.

Risk Managers face a number of difficulties:

Lack of information or knowledge

- ⊙ There may be gaps in the risks identified as well as the control mechanisms and the audit processes. The structure of the organisation may not enable senior management and the risk manager to understand the true nature of the business and the real risks involved.

Unrealistic workloads

- ⊙ Risk Managers often have unrealistic workloads and simply cannot keep on top of the information they require.

Lack of Independent and Reliable Advice

- ⊙ Access to unbiased, independent advice is often difficult to find.
